

Jasmine Murray-Thomas

Community Organizer

The Young Women's Freedom Center

Jasmine Murray-Thomas is a 19-year-old, African-American, young woman who graduated from the Young Women's Freedom Center's Sisters Rising program in 2015. Today, she is a community organizer at the Center, overseeing the youth advocacy board as co-chair and leading all outreach efforts for the Sisters Rising Program.

Jasmine became system involved at the age of 12. Motivated by her own experiences and healing journey, Jasmine is standing up for those without a voice and is looking forward to starting her own nonprofit to support girls and young women behind bars.
